Ladykiller

Out of nearly 4000 shows at the 2018 Edinburgh Fringe this one came in the Top Ten!! So an absolute "must see".

A blood-soaked morality tale about victimhood, zero-hours contracts and tearing up the gender rule book on psychopathy.

A chambermaid, a hotel room and a dead woman. It's not what it looks like, really, it's not. It was self-defence... and anyway the woman was asking for it. The chambermaid considers herself to be a pretty normal person; she reads books. She pretended to read the party manifestos at the General Election. She's even read The Psychopath Test and she's pretty sure she's not one so....

*A smash hit at this fringe - Brody and Baby
An eerily convincing portrait of a neglected mind
A very funny and refreshing comedy from The Thelmas
Saw this at Edinburgh last year and had to bring it to Ledbury. □ It is brilliant!*
