

Dr Ronald Sandison

Written by John Eager

Monday, 16 August 2010 11:25 - Last Updated Monday, 06 September 2010 14:59

An obituary of Dr Ronald Sandison from the Telegraph who passed away at the age of 94 back in June.

Dr Sandison had lived in retirement in Ledbury with his wife, Beth Almond, since 1992. Dr Sandison had pioneered techniques for treating mental patients at Powick Hospital near Worcester, which had included psychotherapy, treatments using art and music and experimental LSD treatment. These practices in the 1950s replaced previous 'medieval' methods such as electric shock treatment and lobotomies.