

Council to Consider Why They Voted the Way They Did

Written by John Eager

Saturday, 01 October 2011 15:18 - Last Updated Thursday, 03 November 2011 14:00

Councilors will get a dose of déjà vu next Thursday as Ledbury Town Council discusses the reasons why they voted the way they did last Thursday.

This bizarre set of circumstances comes about after some councilors have realised that they failed to give a reason for turning down the Tesco planning application.

In an attempt to reverse this the council has been called together again for another Full Council meeting.

As chair of the last meeting the Mayor, councilor Conway, was responsible for ensuring that procedure was correctly followed. It is not known at present who has called this special meeting.

The Ledbury Portal has already written to the council asking why councilors voted the way they did, but it has not received a single reply. One councilor has told the Ledbury Portal that the question has not yet been passed on to him.